THE DEATH OF LOVE.—AS ONE.
I see thee still—my once beloved—
Thy form oft passes o'er my sight;
But oh! my thoughts from thee have roved—
Thou art no longer my delight.

Thrice happy were those tender hours,
Which I have often spent with thee;
Then wert thou fairer than the flowers—
Thou'ret still the same—but not to me.

I've ceased to love—I know not why—
On me thy smiles now beam in vain;
No more thy beauty charms my eye,
I'm deaf to thy once pleasing strain.

No more shall tender rapture thrill,
And beauty ne'er my heart shall move;
For he that cannot love thee still,
Hath surely felt the death of love.

Apothegms.—Men are angry with those who differ from their opinions, in proportion as they wish them to be true, and as they feel doubtful of their truth.—They are indignant against those who would increase their own doubts or excite the doubts of other men.

The opinions of men are modified by the standard which they set up to themselves as the criterion of truth. He is the only true philosopher who uses books and conversation as the guide to knowledge, and reason alone as the guide to opinion.

The opinions of men are modified by the creed of the sect, party, or association to which they belong.—By connecting themselves with a society, therefore, men generally lose their individuality of character, and their independence of mind.

We unavoidably and unconsciously endeavor to strengthen those opinions in our minds which are calculated to increase our self-esteem as well as to magnify our importance in the esteem of the world.

We cannot form an opinion upon any moral subject without reference to the idea which we entertain of our own character and to the character of those whom we love or despise.

Could men suddenly forget all their present opinions and still retain all their present knowledge, their new opinions, which they would immediately form, would be more correct than the old ones which they had forgotten.

Each succeeding generation becomes wiser, in proportion as they make use of the knowledge and neglect the opinions which are handed to them by their predecessors.

The instructors of youth ought to furnish them with facts and arguments, and allow them to form their own opinions—their custom is to furnish them with opinions, and leave them to find out their facts and arguments by their own wits.

He that will not apply to others for facts will be an ignoramus—he that does apply to others for opinions will be a dupe and a bigot.

CONVERSATIONS WITH EX-SHERIFF PARKINS.

Our separated fortune
Shall keep us both the sate: where we are There's daggers in men's smiles. * * *

[Macbeth.]

Where have you been this age? asked the Ex-sheriff. I thought you had forgot me altogether. Well, no apologies; I know your time is much occupied. I am delighted with you. Here you see me full of business; up to the very eyes in papers, letters, scraps, documents, and I know not what. * * * *

Poor Miss Chaworth, Lord Byron's first flame! I knew her well. She was a fine, buxom, luscious and delicious girl. She had the prettiest neck of any woman I ever saw; and I tell you that a handsome neck, to a horse or a woman, is at least one third of this beauty. A scrappy neck is a most horrible deformity. Mahomet lets no scrappy necks into his paradise. Poor Byron, if he only had married Miss Chaworth, his destiny would have been different. But she refused him, and threw herself away upon Musters, a handsome fellow to be sure, but was without mind, sentiment or feeling. Musters, after living with her a few years, left her and ran away with a creature to Paris, where he staid some years.

What dreadful corruption of manners there is among fashionable society! Sir, it is the same in this country as in the old world. I am not sure but it is worse here. In Europe the great and wealthy give their damnable wickedness a polish, an elegance—but here, it is on most occasions vulgar and low. Your great scoundrels here spring from dirt, and dirt they always remain. I have known a horrible case in Boston. One day a beautiful young girl lived in a village in —. She was one of the finest specimens of a bracelet. She was lively and interesting. Suddenly her father died. Her uncle lived in — in great style. She went to his house to live. Her uncle had a son about her age, and he was a good boy—wages $2 per week.

BOSTON TRUSS MANUFACTORY.—J. W. PHILIPS—successor to BEATH & FOSTER—would inform the public that he will continue to manufacture the different kinds of Trusses used by Messrs Beath & Foster, with improvements on the same. Having had occasion during the past season in applying many of these instruments to some of the most difficult and intricate cases of Hernia, the undersigned is confident that no cases, however difficult, if applied to him, will pass without receiving the most satisfactory relief. As the safety and comfort of the ruptured patient greatly depends upon the adaptation of a truss to the patient, or rather it is intended to support, it need not be inferred that much care should be taken in selecting such a truss as is suited to the particular case. To obviate the frequent complaints made of the inefficiency of trusses, the undersigned keeps for sale an extensive assortment of the best quality, and fitted with peculiar care.

Among the great variety of trusses, made and kept on hand, are—patent elastic spring trusses with spring pads—improved hinge and pivot ball and socket joints—umbilical prosthesis and suspensory trusses—Hull's double and single do—Philadelphia India rubber truss—Batemans', Marsh's, and Sander's do—Reed's spiral spring truss, N. PATENT ADHESIVE FELT, FOR COVERING SHIPS' BOTTOMS.—FAIRBANKS, LORING & CO., corner of Kilby and Milk street, respectfully give notice to Ship Owners, that they have on hand, and will be supplied from time to time with the Patent Adhesive Felt, for covering Ships' bottoms. The utility of this article has been so fully established by the Board of Commissioners of the United States Navy, that during the last year they purchased nearly six thousand sheets, and have recently ordered fifty thousand sheets for the present year.

This Felt affords complete protection against the destructive effects of the worm, whilst, by its strength and flexibility, it also prevents leakage, whether arising by working of ships in storms of weather, by accident, or otherwise. It will prevent the corrosion of iron, by the effect of the copper on iron fastened ships, where the fastenings and heads of bolts are protected by a covering of it.

"There are many instances of ships in the East India and other services having the copper accidentally rubbed off, by which the worm has not only gnawed through the wood, sheathing and tarred paper, but also through the plank, and occasioned leakage and damage, as well as laborious working at the pumps, and many other instances of leakage, occasioned by ships working in rainy gales. Against both of these, it is submitted a covering of the Patent Felt affords complete protection."

Samples of this Felt may be seen at several of the Insurance Offices, State street, at the Marine Railway, and also at our store, where testimonial of its utility may be seen, and directions for its application be had.

TUESDAY, JULY 14, 1835.

For the Boston Morning Post.

Judge Strong.—We took occasion recently to offer some remarks upon the decision of this Judge, in excluding the testimony of Mr. Winsley, in a trial for forgery, at Salem, because it was said he did not believe in a future existence, nor in a spiritual God, like the God in which the Judge himself believed; preferring to let a criminal escape conviction, rather than to lose an opportunity of branding with odium those who differed from him in religious opinions. We showed in our former remarks, that this act was an arbitrary exercise of judicial authority, not warranted by any statute or constitutional law—not warranted by usage in the ordinary and common concerns of life, nor by reason and common sense, but in direct violation of an express provision of the bill of rights, which says no man shall be hurt for his religious sentiments or professions, provided he demean himself peaceably, and do not disturb others in their worship.

It is much the fashion to cry up the Judiciary as the purest and most intelligent branch of the government, and the Judges, whatever may be their own merits or the merits of their decisions, from the highest to the lowest, are lauded as men of extraordinary integrity and wisdom.

When, in truth, there is no branch of our government so wayward and grasping, as the Judiciary.

Nor is this very surprising—lawyers are trained in a narrow path—they are men who look to precedent rather than principle—who search to find what has been done, rather than what it is right to do. When at the bar, they dare not risk their own influence and the interests of their clients, by a vigorous opposition to the opinion of the bench, however wrong that opinion may be; and besides, the very profession of the law tends to weaken the moral sense, and to make them only legally honest. Junius, I think, says the practice of the law tends to narrow the understanding and corrupt the heart.

Judge Strong is one of those whom it has been fashionable to praise in this State. Let his decisions show how much he is entitled to his fame.

At the recent trial of Mr. Cheever, of Salem, on an indictment for a libel, a crime, by the way, not known under our CONSTITUTION, which guarantees the UNRESTRAINED liberty of the press, and is only made a crime by Judicial usurpation, first asserted and enforced by Judge Parsons, Judge Strong made the following decision:—

"A N ACT TO GUARD THE HEALTH OF SOULS."
"Be enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled, and by the Authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this act, Christian missionaries, priests, clergymen, and other pious persons, having the care of, or professing knowledge concerning souls, shall be permitted to testify in any court of justice as to the effect of any act, opinion, or thing upon the welfare of the Soul, for the purpose of enabling the court and jury to judge of the criminality of those doing such act, or entertaining such opinion."

The legal effect of Judge Strong's opinion is the same as would be that of the above act if it were to pass! And yet it would shock the moral sense of this community to offer such a bill to our Legislature, while the same people laud the purity and wisdom of our judiciary, and no judge stands higher with them, than this same Judge Strong.

We think however, for the credit of the State and of the age, for the security of our free institutions and for the safety of the people that this Judge should be removed.

POLICE COURT.

Assault on the Watch.—James Thompson and Patrick Murphy, on complaint of Cyrus Babbitt, constable of the Centre Watch, was arraigned for an assault on Ephraim Pierce, while in the discharge of his duty as a watchman, on Saturday night. About 12 o'clock on Saturday night, the Centre Watch were called out to suppress a fight in Ann street, and several of the corps arrived at the battle ground just in time to see one man knock down another. Pierce arrested the assailant, who was immediately rescued by a comrade, and attempted to escape. Pierce gave chase, but was followed by Thompson, who, upon overtaking him, knocked him down by a violent blow behind the left ear. Thompson was about finishing Pierce, by kicking, when he himself was attacked in the rear by Watchman Hootey, who, being reinforced by two other watchmen, convinced him by a little hool logic, that his only safety was in an unresisting surrender. Patrick Murphy played the part of a fool, and endeavored to rescue Thompson from the custody of the watch, whereby he compelled them to arrest himself as an accessory after the fact, for making common cause with the principal. Pierce bled profusely at both ears, for some time after the assault; and as a brickbat was found near his head, it is supposed that Thompson had it in his hand when he struck him. Dr. Homans was of opinion that the skull is fractured, and that it will be a great while before he can recover from the effects of the injury.— Both prisoners were therefore ordered to recognize in the sum of $500 each, for their appearance at the Municipal Court, in default of which they were committed.

A Scene.—About noon, a tall, venerable septuagenary, named Dijah Bowen, entered the court, and, without exchanging a word with any body, marched up to one of the windows, and deliberately smashed every pane of glass in it with his walking stick. He was immediately taken into custody, and confined in the lock-up to undergo an examination, after the dignitaries, high and low, of the court, had discussed their dinners, but before he could be permitted to smell of his—no very great hardship that, however, on such an excruciating heater as was yesterday, when the "sun" literally "shed abroad intolerable day."

In the afternoon he was arraigned, and two physicians gave it as their decided opinion that he was insane, and had "his head full of false premises." His son attributed his mental alienation, to difficulties that he had encountered in life, and to the number of lawsuits in which he had been engaged. When his son attempted to give a detail of his insane actions, he protested vehemently against being put down by the testimony of his own family. It was also stated that his aberration of intellect had been greatly aggravated by the loss of a son, who was drowned in Boston harbor some years since. Discharged.

Patrick Dorsey—was taken while fighting on Sunday night, in Union street. In point of dimensions, Patrick was rather a scant pattern; and as to appearance, his face and coat were both torn to rags.—Plea,—"I want to see my opponent, and to have justice and law; yes, Law is what I wants—L, A, W, as they say, I must have." This singular plea was recorded as equivalent to "Not Guilty;" and the evidence was given in by the watchman as follows, verbatim:—"When I come up they were fighting putty hash fur tew sich leetle fellers—I took the other off, but then this little critter flew'd at him agin." He was furnished with a bill of fine and costs, and the name of the other "little critter" that he was fighting with, so that he might bring an action against him for damages done his coat and countenance.

Patrick Tiley's penchant for female society was considerably stimulated by certain "Exhilarating Drops," that he had imbibed on Sunday afternoon, in consequence of which he gave chase to three or four different women in and about Ann street, though frequently driven away by Constables Reid and Ellis, till Reid, whose patience is as tough as his heart is tender, felt compelled to arrest him.—2 months in the House of Correction.

To the Editor of the Boston Morning Post.

Sir—I observe a paragraph in the Morning Post of this day, signed "Humbugged," attempting to explain the deception of the apparition, (for a deception it certainly is, and the public were made aware of it.) The writer says that I took the miniatures on the stage and left them there, taking another box of miniatures which were without doubt alike! This is a mistake. I took two or three miniatures out of the identical lot given by the audience, out of which a lady selected one. The writer says again, that my wife crept in at the back part of the box and shut her eyes. I suspect that his own optics must have been shot; could he not see above, below, and around? Was the table not placed in the centre of the stage, and the draperies tucked up? Is there no other way he can account for the apparition, if not, I can enlighten him for a consideration!!!

Lastly, he says that the audience expressed dissatisfaction.

If I am to construe the plaudits that followed the illusion into dissatisfaction, I am at a loss to understand what is meant by approbation.

A few gentlemen remained to see the miniature, which was not in my power to show.

I would not have taken notice of said paragraph, had it not been so widely different from the manner the illusion was performed. It appears that the other illusions pleased.

I am sir, yours, respectfully,

RAHAL MARCHAEL.

Boylston Hall, July 13, 1835.

The new Post Master General has issued a series of rules and regulations, calculated to add to the efficiency of that important department.

Dr. Locke of Cincinnati, has invented and made for Mr Clayton, the Aeronaut, a quadrant, by means of which he should have instituted this ordinance to be observed in the church tower, and spoken of the fruit of the vine, and water, and wine, or tamari water, or molasses and water, or any thing else than that which his words properly and exclusively indicate.

If the New York correspondent of the Atlas would threaten less and perform more, it would be to his credit.

"LEON" is, we presume, ready to meet him in the field of argument, whenever it may suit his pleasure to enter the arena. He may, therefore, save his threats for the future.

Mr. Henderson, of Albemarle county, (Va.) a young gentleman of great reputed worth, possessed of an adequate fortune, and but just married to a lady of beauty and distinction, recently committed suicide by blowing out his brains.

Mr. Leigh, of Virginia, has published a card in which he avows his intention of taking his seat in the Senate, in opposition, as it will be, to the will of his constituents.

On the birth-day of the Princess Victoria, May 24th, Mr Green, (who made an ascent from Hyde Park at the coronation of George IV.) made a 199th balloon excursion, taking with him Jacopo, a monkey, who safely descended in a parachute.

The Sea Serpent—(our Express)—has gone down east on a furlough. His object is speculation—he took four and sixpence with him, and we expect will come home, "made man." We hope he went get above his business.

any eulogium; and at this time no one can doubt of its being the very best article for strengthening and promoting the the proper method of purifying it, and the imposition upon the public of a spurious article. That this prejudice may be wholly removed, this article now offered is warranted the pure Oil, the possibility of its injuring the Hair is entirely precluded by the manner in which it has been purified. To prevent fraud, the genuine is enclosed in two wrappers, the inside one being
